When a Resident Refuses Care — Handling It Gently — Scenario Dialogue

Can-do: Accept a resident's refusal without forcing, find the reason, offer a small easy step, and re-invite gently — protecting trust and dignity.

1 · Dialogue & Why — 会話

Hana (caregiver)

田中さん、そろそろ お風呂の 時間ですよ。

Tanaka-san, it's about time for your bath.

Why: A normal, gentle prompt — そろそろ ('about time now') 時間ですよ ('it's time'). But care must always be offered, never imposed, so when the resident refuses (next line) you respond with patience, not pressure.

Tanaka-san (resident)

いやよ。今日は 入りたくない。

No. I don't want to bathe today.

Why: いや = 'no / I don't want to'; 入りたくない = 'don't want to get in' (〜たくない = don't want to). A refusal is a valid expression, not 'problem behaviour'. The first rule: STOP. Don't push, don't argue. Consent is the premise of all care.

Hana (caregiver)

そうですか。無理には しませんよ。大丈夫です。

I see. I won't force you. It's okay.

Why: Accept the refusal immediately and out loud: 無理にはしません = 'I won't force it' (無理に = 'forcibly'). Forcing (無理強い) is counter-productive — it deepens resistance and destroys trust (信頼関係). Removing the pressure first is what makes a later re-invite possible.

Hana (caregiver)

何か 気になる ことが ありますか。

Is something bothering you?

Why: Now find the reason. 気になること = 'something on your mind / bothering you'. Refusal usually has a cause — fear of cold, pain, embarrassment, 'I can do it myself', or confusion (認知症). Asking calmly (傾聴 = active listening) lets you solve the real problem.

Tanaka-san (resident)

寒いのが 嫌なのよ。

I just don't like being cold.

Why: The real reason appears: 寒い ('cold') 嫌 ('dislike'). Now you can address it directly instead of pushing. This is why you always ask — the refusal wasn't about the bath, it was about the cold, which you can fix.

Hana (caregiver)

お部屋を 暖かく しておきますね。先に お湯に 足だけ つけてみませんか。

I'll warm up your room. How about starting with just your feet in the warm water?

Why: Solve the cause (暖(あたた)かくしておきます = 'I'll have it warmed up', ～ておく = do in advance) AND offer a tiny first step: 足(あし)だけ ('just your feet') つけてみませんか ('shall we try dipping?'). A small, easy step lowers resistance — once they start, the rest often follows.

Tanaka-san (resident)

足(あし)だけ なら… いいわ。

If it's just my feet... all right.

Why: 足(あし)だけなら ('if it's just feet') いいわ ('okay') — the small step worked. Never celebrate too loudly or rush; keep it calm and let her keep control of the pace. If she'd still said no, you'd withdraw warmly and try again later — patience over pressure.

Hana (caregiver)

ありがとうございます。田中(たなか)さんの ペースで 大丈夫(だいじょうぶ)ですよ。また 見(み)に 来(き)ますね。

Thank you. Your own pace is fine. I'll come and check on you again.

Why: Thank her (it's her choice, and she gave it) and hand back control: ペースで ('at your pace') 大丈夫(だいじょうぶ) ('is fine'). Respecting her pace preserves 自尊心(じそんしん) (self-esteem) and rebuilds trust for tomorrow. また 見(み)に 来(き)ます ね (Ep 13) closes warmly: no pressure now, and the door stays open.
