Talking with Family — Updating a Visitor Politely — Scenario Dialogue

Can-do: Greet a visiting family member, give a clear factual update on the resident, share a concern plainly, and reassure them — using full keigo.

1 · Dialogue & Why — 会話

Hana (caregiver)

こんにちは。本日は お越しくださり、ありがとうございます。

Hello. Thank you very much for coming in today.

Why: A warm, respectful greeting to a visitor. 本日 is the formal word for 'today' (more polite than 今日). お越しくださり uses 尊敬語 — お越し is the honorific of 来る ('to come'), and 〜くださり thanks them for doing it. First impressions build the family's trust.

Hana (caregiver)

介護スタッフの ハナと 申します。いつも お世話に なっております。

I'm Hana, one of the care staff. Thank you for your continued support.

Why: Always identify yourself — role + name — so the family feels secure. 申します is the humble form of 言う ('to be called'). お世話になっております (humble おる) is the set phrase for 'thank you for everything / your ongoing support' — you'll use it constantly with families.

Daughter (visitor)

いつも 母が お世話に なって います。母は 元気でしょうか。

Thank you for always taking care of my mother. Is she doing well?

Why: Notice the daughter calls her own mother 母 (haha) — the humble word you use for YOUR OWN family to others. (You, the staff, would call the resident お母様 — honorific, because she's the listener's family.) This in/out-group switch is core Japanese keigo.

Hana (caregiver)

はい。お母様は お変わりなく お過ごしです。

Yes. Your mother is doing well, with no changes.

Why: To the family, you refer to the resident with honorifics: お母様 ('your mother', respectful) and お過ごしです (尊敬語 of 過ごす, 'to spend one's time'). お変わりなく = 'without any change / doing as well as ever' — a reassuring, standard phrase.

Hana (caregiver)

昨日は レクに 参加なさって、笑顔も 見られましたよ。

Yesterday she joined the recreation and we even saw her smiling.

Why: Give CONCRETE, factual, positive detail — families treasure it. 参加なさって uses なさる (尊敬語 of する) for the resident's action. 笑顔も見られました = 'we could even see her smile'. Specific moments ('joined recreation, smiled') reassure far more than a vague 'she's fine'.

Hana (caregiver)

ただ、少し 食欲が 落ちて いらっしゃいます。

That said, her appetite has dropped a little.

> Why: Share concerns plainly and early — never hide them. ただ = 'however / that said', softly turning to the concern. 落ちていらっしゃいます uses いらっしゃる (尊敬語) for the resident. Say it in plain, non-alarming words (食欲が落ちる = 'appetite drops') — you report, you don't diagnose.

Daughter (visitor)

そうですか…。少し 心配ですね。

I see... that's a little worrying.

> Why: 心配 = 'worry / concern'. When a family member voices worry, acknowledge it and offer reassurance and a plan (next line) rather than brushing it off. Trust is built by taking their concern seriously.

Hana (caregiver)

看護師とも 相談しております。何か ありましたら、すぐに ご連絡いたします。

We're consulting with the nurse as well. If anything comes up, we'll contact you right away.

> Why: Reassure with a concrete plan. 相談しております (humble おる) = 'we are consulting'; ご連絡いたします uses いたす (humble する) = 'we will contact you'. Promising proactive contact ('we'll never hide anything') is what earns a family's lasting trust.
