A Pain Complaint — Asking, Observing, and Reporting — Scenario Dialogue

Can-do: Respond to a resident's pain with concern, ask where and how much it hurts, reassure them, and report clearly to the nurse — without medicating.

1 · Dialogue & Why — 会話

Tanaka-san
(resident)

ねえ、^{こし}腰が^{いた}痛いよ。

Excuse me, my back hurts.

Why: ねえ = a soft 'hey / excuse me' to get your attention. 腰 = 'lower back'; 痛い = 'hurts / painful'. When a resident reports pain, stop what you're doing and respond with full attention and concern — never brush it off with '大丈夫でしょう' ('you're probably fine'), which is a classic NG response.

Hana
(caregiver)

つらいですね。どの^{いた}あたりが痛いですか。

That must be hard. Around where does it hurt?

Why: Empathise first — つらいですね ('that must be hard') shows you take it seriously. Then localise: どのあたり = 'around where / which area'. Pinpointing the location is the first thing the nurse will need, so you ask it right away.

Tanaka-san
(resident)

この^{うご}へん。^{いた}動くと痛むの。

Around here. It hurts when I move.

Why: このへん = 'around here' (へん = area). 動くと痛む = 'it hurts when I move' (〜と = 'whenever/when'). Whether pain is triggered by movement, or constant, is important information — note exactly what the resident tells you, in their words.

Hana
(caregiver)

いつから^{いた}痛みますか。どれくらい^{いた}痛いですか。

Since when has it hurt? How much does it hurt?

Why: Two more key questions: いつから ('since when' — the timeline) and どれくらい ('how much' — the severity). These build the factual picture. For severity, a simple scale helps: 少しですか、とてもですか ('a little, or a lot?'), or onomatopoeia — ズキズキ (throbbing) / ジンジン (dull ache).

Tanaka-san
(resident)

さっきから。ズキズキするの。

Since a little while ago. It's throbbing.

Why: さっきから = 'since a little while ago'. ズキズキ is the onomatopoeia for throbbing pain — Japanese uses these sound-words to describe pain precisely (ズキズキ throbbing, ジンジン tingling/dull, チクチク pricking). Learning them lets you report the KIND of pain accurately.

Hana
(caregiver)

つらいですね。すぐに^{かんごし}看護師さん^よを呼びますね。

That sounds hard. I'll call the nurse right away.

Why: Here is the caregiver's boundary: you observe and report, you do NOT medicate or diagnose. ^{すぐに} ('right away') ^{呼びますね} ('I'll call') escalates promptly to the ^{看護師} (nurse), who decides on treatment. Reassure the resident while you get help — never leave them feeling dismissed.

Hana
(caregiver)

^{らく}楽な^{しせい}姿勢^{もど}になりましょうか。すぐ^{もど}戻りますね。

Shall we get you into a more comfortable position? I'll be right back.

Why: While waiting, ease the resident: ^{楽な姿勢} = 'a comfortable position' (^楽 = at ease, ^{姿勢} = posture). Helping them settle and promising ^{すぐ戻ります} ('I'll be right back') keeps them calm and cared-for. Then you observe — ^{face, swelling, warmth} (^{熱感}) — to report.

Hana
(caregiver)

^{かんごし}（看護師に）^{たなか}田中さんが、さっきから^{こし}腰^{いた}の^{うった}痛み^{ねっかん}を訴えています。熱感
はありません。

(to the nurse) Tanaka-san has been complaining of lower-back pain since a little while ago. There's no heat/warmth.

Why: The factual handover — the same clear reporting as ^{申し送り} (ks-10). State WHO (^{田中さん}), WHAT (^{腰の痛み}), SINCE WHEN (^{さっきから}), and an OBSERVATION (^{熱感はありません} = 'no warmth'). ^{訴える} = 'to complain of (a symptom)', the standard care/medical verb. Concise facts help the nurse act fast.
