A Pain Complaint — Asking, Observing, and Reporting — Scenario Dialogue

Can-do: Respond to a resident's pain with concern, ask where and how much it hurts, reassure them, and report clearly to the nurse — without medicating.

1 · Dialogue & Why — 会話

Tanaka-san
(resident)

ねえ、腰^{こし}が 痛^{いた}いのよ。

Excuse me, my back hurts.

Why: ねえ = a soft 'hey / excuse me' to get your attention. 腰[こし] = 'lower back'; 痛[いた]い = 'hurts / painful'. When a resident reports pain, stop what you're doing and respond with full attention and concern — never brush it off with '大丈夫[だいじょうぶ]でしょう' ('you're probably fine'), which is a classic NG response.

Hana
(caregiver)

つらいですね。どの あたり^{いた}が 痛^{いた}いですか。

That must be hard. Around where does it hurt?

Why: Empathise first — つらいですね ('that must be hard') shows you take it seriously. Then localise: どのあたり = 'around where / which area'. Pinpointing the location is the first thing the nurse will need, so you ask it right away.

Tanaka-san
(resident)

この へん^{うご}。動^{いた}くと 痛^{いた}むの。

Around here. It hurts when I move.

Why: このへん = 'around here' (へん = area). 動[うご]くと痛[いた]む = 'it hurts when I move' (～と = 'whenever/when'). Whether pain is triggered by movement, or constant, is important information — note exactly what the resident tells you, in their words.

Hana
(caregiver)

いつから 痛^{いた}みますか。どれくらい 痛^{いた}いですか。

Since when has it hurt? How much does it hurt?

Why: Two more key questions: いつから ('since when' — the timeline) and どれくらい ('how much' — the severity). These build the factual picture. For severity, a simple scale helps: 少[すこ]しですか、とてもですか ('a little, or a lot?'), or onomatopoeia — ズキズキ (throbbing) / ジンジン (dull ache).

Tanaka-san
(resident)

さっきから。ズキズキ するの。

Since a little while ago. It's throbbing.

Why: さっきから = 'since a little while ago'. ズキズキ is the onomatopoeia for throbbing pain — Japanese uses these sound-words to describe pain precisely (ズキズキ throbbing, ジンジン tingling/dull, チクチク stinging). Learning them lets you report the KIND of pain accurately.

Hana
(caregiver)

つらいですね。すぐに 看護師さん^{かんごし}を 呼びます^よね。

That sounds hard. I'll call the nurse right away.

Why: Here is the caregiver's boundary: you observe and report, you do NOT medicate or diagnose. すぐに ('right away') 呼[よ]びますね ('I'll call') escalates promptly to the 看護師[かんごし] (nurse), who decides on treatment. Reassure the resident while you get help — never leave them feeling dismissed.

Hana
(caregiver)

楽^{らく}な 姿勢^{しせい}に なりましょうか。すぐ 戻^{もど}りますね。

Shall we get you into a more comfortable position? I'll be right back.

Why: While waiting, ease the resident: 楽[らく]な姿勢[しせい] = 'a comfortable position' (楽[らく] = at ease, 姿勢[しせい] = posture). Helping them settle and promising すぐ戻[もど]ります ('I'll be right back') keeps them calm and cared-for. Then you observe — face, swelling, warmth (熱感[ねつかん]) — to report.

Hana
(caregiver)

(看護師^{かんごし}に) 田中^{たなか}さんが、さっきから 腰^{こし}の 痛み^{いた}を 訴^{うった}えています。熱感^{ねつかん} は ありません。

(to the nurse) Tanaka-san has been complaining of lower-back pain since a little while ago. There's no heat/warmth.

Why: The factual handover — the same clear reporting as 申[もう]し送[おく]り (ks-10). State WHO (田中[たなか]さん), WHAT (腰[こし]の 痛[いた]み), SINCE WHEN (さっきから), and an OBSERVATION (熱感[ねつかん] はありません = 'no warmth'). 訴[うった]える = 'to complain of (a symptom)', the standard care/medical verb. Concise facts help the nurse act fast.
