排泄の 介助

Toileting Assistance — Helping with Dignity — Scenario Dialogue

Can-do: Invite a resident to the toilet discreetly, assist while protecting their privacy and dignity, and confirm they feel better.

1 · Dialogue & Why — 会話

Hana (caregiver)

田中さん、そろそろ お手洗いに 行きませんか。

Tanaka-san, shall we head to the toilet soon?

Why: お手洗い ('hand-washing place') is the polite, softer word for toilet — gentler than トイレ. そろそろ ('about time now') makes a timed, low-key suggestion, and 行きませんか ('won't you go?') is a soft invitation. Say this quietly and privately — never announce toileting across a room.

Tanaka-san (resident)

うん…、実は さっきから 我慢していたの。

Mm... actually I've been holding it for a while.

Why: Residents often hold on (我慢する) out of embarrassment rather than ask. That's exactly why we offer on a gentle schedule instead of waiting to be asked — it prevents accidents (失禁) and protects pride. 実は = 'actually / to tell the truth', softening an admission.

Hana (caregiver)

そうでしたか。すぐ ご案内しますね。恥ずかしくないですよ。

I see. I'll take you right away. There's nothing to be embarrassed about.

Why: ご案内します is the humble form of 案内する ('to guide') — ご + Sino-Japanese noun + します. Naming the feeling and easing it ('恥ずかしくないですよ' — nothing to be embarrassed about) directly protects the resident's dignity, which is the heart of 排泄介助.

Hana (caregiver)

ズボンを 下ろしますね。手すりに つかまってください。

I'll lower your trousers, okay. Please hold on to the handrail.

Why: ALWAYS announce an action before you touch or move clothing — 〜しますね tells the resident what's about to happen so they're never startled or exposed without warning. 手すりに つかまってください ('hold the handrail') keeps them steady: falls are a real risk in the bathroom.

Hana (caregiver)

終わったら 呼んでくださいね。外で 待っています。

Call me when you're finished. I'll be waiting outside.

Why: This one line is pure dignity. Where it's safe, you step out of sight and let the resident have privacy (プライバシー) — standing and watching strips away their pride. 終わったら = 'when you're finished'; 呼んでください = 'please call me'. You stay close, but out of view.

Tanaka-san (resident)

ありがとう。もう 大丈夫(だいじょうぶ)よ。

Thank you. I'm done now.

Why: もう = 'already / now'; もう大丈夫(だいじょうぶ) = 'I'm okay now / all done'. When you hear this, respond calmly and help them finish — no reaction to smell or mess, ever. Staying matter-of-fact is itself a form of respect.

Hana (caregiver)

きれいに しますね。手(て)を 洗(あら)いましょう。

I'll clean you up. Let's wash your hands.

Why: きれいにします ('I'll make you clean') is a gentle way to say you'll wipe/tidy — softer than the blunt 拭(ふ)く. Then 手(て)を洗(あら)いましょう ('let's wash hands') — hygiene matters, and phrasing it as 'let's' keeps it a shared, dignified routine rather than a command.

Hana (caregiver)

すっきりしましたね。よく 我慢(がまん)されましたね。

You feel better now, don't you. You held on so well.

Why: A dignifying close. すっきりしましたね shares the relief, and 我慢(がまん)されました uses 尊敬語(そんけいご) (される, the honorific of する) to gently praise the resident — turning a moment that could feel shameful into one where they're respected. Small words like this build trust (信頼関係(しんらいかんけい)).
