Hydration &amp; Medication — Drinks and Giving Medicine Safely — Scenario Dialogue

Can-do: Offer a drink, help a resident sip safely, and give the right medicine at the right time — watching for choking every step.

1 · Dialogue &amp; Why — 会話

Hana
(caregiver)たなか ちゃ も
田中さん、お茶を お持ちしましょうか。

Tanaka-san, shall I bring you some tea?

Why: お持ちします is the humble form of 持つ ('to bring') — お + stem + します lowers yourself to offer service, exactly right for staff. Adding 〜ましょうか turns it into a gentle offer ('shall I...?') rather than just announcing it. Offering fluids matters: elderly residents dehydrate (脱水) easily because they feel thirst less.

Tanaka-san
(resident)すこ のど かわ
ええ、少し 喉が 渴きました。

Yes, I'm a little thirsty.

Why: 喉が渴く ('the throat gets dry') is the normal way to say 'be thirsty' in Japanese — you rarely say it with a word for 'thirsty' alone. Hearing 喉 (throat) and 渴く (to get dry) together is worth memorising as a set.

Hana
(caregiver)お すわ すこ の
では、起きて 座りましょうか。少しずつ 飲みましょうね。

Then let's sit up. We'll drink little by little, okay?

Why: Sitting upright (座位) before drinking is the #1 rule against 誤嚥 (aspiration) — drinking while reclined sends liquid toward the airway. 少しずつ ('little by little') and slow pacing stop the resident from gulping. Notice you invite with 〜ましょうか / 〜ましょうね, never an order.

Tanaka-san
(resident)

ありがとう。おいしいわ。

Thank you. It's nice.

Why: The resident answers casually — わ here is a soft, warm sentence ending common in older women's speech. You keep your polite/humble language even though she speaks plainly to you; that one-way politeness is normal in care.

Hana
(caregiver)たなか ひる くすり いま の
田中さん、お昼の お薬です。今 飲んでも いいですか。

Tanaka-san, here's your lunchtime medicine. Is it okay to take it now?

Why: Saying the resident's name and the medicine out loud (田中さん、お昼のお薬です) is 本人確認 — confirming the RIGHT person and the RIGHT time, out loud, so you never mix up residents' medicine (誤薬). 飲んでもいいですか asks consent ('may I / is it okay') — you never put medicine in someone's mouth without a yes.

Tanaka-san
(resident)

はい、<sup>ねが</sup>お願いします。

Yes, please.

Why: <sup>ねが</sup>お願いします ('please; I ask this of you') is the everyday phrase for accepting help or making a request. It's one of the most useful phrases in the whole language — you'll say it and hear it constantly.

Hana
(caregiver)

<sup>みず</sup>お水と <sup>いっしょ</sup>一緒に <sup>だいじょうぶ</sup>どうぞ。ゆっくりで大丈夫ですよ。

Please take it with water. No rush — take your time.

Why: Pills go down safely <sup>いっしょ</sup>一緒に ('together') with enough water — dry-swallowing risks the pill sticking or going the wrong way. <sup>だいじょうぶ</sup>どうぞ warmly offers, and <sup>だいじょうぶ</sup>ゆっくりで大丈夫 removes any pressure to hurry, which is both kinder and safer against <sup>ごえん</sup>誤嚥.

Hana
(caregiver)

Did it go down properly? Nothing left in your mouth?

(resident)

ええ、<sup>だいじょうぶ</sup>大丈夫。すっきりしました。

Yes, I'm fine. I feel refreshed.

Why: すっきりする = 'to feel refreshed / clear'. It's a lovely word to recognise — residents use it after drinking, using the toilet, or a bath. Her <sup>だいじょうぶ</sup>大丈夫 confirms the swallow went fine, so you can record it and move on.
