Hydration & Medication — Drinks and Giving Medicine Safely — Scenario Dialogue

Can-do: Offer a drink, help a resident sip safely, and give the right medicine at the right time — watching for choking every step.

1 · Dialogue & Why — 会話

Hana (caregiver)

田中さん、お茶を お持ちしましょうか。

Tanaka-san, shall I bring you some tea?

Why: お持ちします is the humble form of 持つ ('to bring') — お + stem + します lowers yourself to offer service, exactly right for staff. Adding ～ましょうか turns it into a gentle offer ('shall I...?') rather than just announcing it. Offering fluids matters: elderly residents dehydrate (脱水) easily because they feel thirst less.

Tanaka-san (resident)

ええ、少し 喉が 渇きました。

Yes, I'm a little thirsty.

Why: 喉が渇く ('the throat gets dry') is the normal way to say 'be thirsty' in Japanese — you rarely say it with a word for 'thirsty' alone. Hearing 喉 (throat) and 渇く (to get dry) together is worth memorising as a set.

Hana (caregiver)

では、起きて 座りましょうか。少しずつ 飲みましょうね。

Then let's sit up. We'll drink little by little, okay?

Why: Sitting upright (座位) before drinking is the #1 rule against 誤嚥 (aspiration) — drinking while reclined sends liquid toward the airway. 少しずつ ('little by little') and slow pacing stop the resident from gulping. Notice you invite with ～ましょうか / ～ましょうね, never an order.

Tanaka-san (resident)

ありがとう。おいしいわ。

Thank you. It's nice.

Why: The resident answers casually — わ here is a soft, warm sentence ending common in older women's speech. You keep your polite/humble language even though she speaks plainly to you; that one-way politeness is normal in care.

Hana (caregiver)

田中さん、お昼の お薬です。今 飲んでも いいですか。

Tanaka-san, here's your lunchtime medicine. Is it okay to take it now?

Why: Saying the resident's name and the medicine out loud ('田中さん、お昼のお薬です') is 本人確認 — confirming the RIGHT person and the RIGHT time, out loud, so you never mix up residents' medicine (誤薬). 飲んでもいいですか asks consent ('may I / is it okay') — you never put medicine in someone's mouth without a yes.

Tanaka-san (resident)

はい、お願(ねが)いします。

Yes, please.

Why: お願(ねが)いします ('please; I ask this of you') is the everyday phrase for accepting help or making a request. It's one of the most useful phrases in the whole language — you'll say it and hear it constantly.

Hana (caregiver)

お水(みず)と 一緒(いっしょ)に どうぞ。ゆっくりで 大丈夫(だいじょうぶ)ですよ。

Please take it with water. No rush — take your time.

Why: Pills go down safely 一緒(いっしょ)に ('together') with enough water — dry-swallowing risks the pill sticking or going the wrong way. どうぞ warmly offers, and ゆっくりで大丈夫(だいじょうぶ) removes any pressure to hurry, which is both kinder and safer against 誤嚥(ごえん).

Hana (caregiver)

ちゃんと 飲(の)み込(こ)めましたか。お口(くち)に 残(のこ)っていませんか。

Did it go down properly? Nothing left in your mouth?

Why: 飲(の)み込(こ)む = 'to swallow'; 飲(の)み込(こ)めましたか is the potential form ('were you able to swallow?'). ALWAYS confirm the swallow — a pill left in the mouth or a wet, gurgly voice afterward is a choking warning. Checking 'anything left?' (残(のこ)っていませんか) is a standard safety step before you move on.

Tanaka-san (resident)

ええ、大丈夫(だいじょうぶ)。すっきりしました。

Yes, I'm fine. I feel refreshed.

Why: すっきりする = 'to feel refreshed / clear'. It's a lovely word to recognise — residents use it after drinking, using the toilet, or a bath. Her 大丈夫(だいじょうぶ) confirms the swallow went fine, so you can record it and move on.
