Handover — Reporting to the Nurse — Scenario Dialogue

Can-do: Report a resident's condition and changes to a nurse clearly, and confirm instructions.

1 · Dialogue & Why — 会話

Hana
(caregiver)

たなか け さ すこ ねつ
田中さんですが、今朝 少し 熱がありました。

About Tanaka-san — she had a slight fever this morning.

Why: Start a report with 「[person]さんですが、…」 — the か here isn't 'but'; it's a soft lead-in that means 'regarding ~'. It flags the topic before the details, which is exactly how handovers open. 熱があります = 'has a fever' (literally 'a fever exists').

Nurse Sato

なんど
何度でしたか。

What was the temperature?

Why: 何度 = 'how many degrees'. 度 counts degrees (and also times/occurrences). でしたか is the polite past question ('was it?'). The nurse asks for the exact number — always report precise figures in care.

Hana
(caregiver)

たいおん ど ぶ
体温は 37度5分でした。

Her temperature was 37.5.

Why: For body temperature the decimal is read as 分 (ぶ): 37.5°C = 三十七度五分 (さんじゅうななどごぶ). This is a fixed medical/care convention — know it, because you'll report temperatures constantly.

Nurse Sato

しょくじ
食事は とれましたか。

Was she able to eat?

Why: とれました = potential past of とる ('to take'); 食事をとる = 'to have a meal'. Asking if she was ABLE to eat (potential) checks her condition gently. Topic marked with は (食事は).

Hana
(caregiver)

はんぶん め あ
はい、半分ほど 召し上がりました。

Yes, she ate about half.

Why: 半分ほど = 'about half' (ほど = 'approximately'). Even when reporting ABOUT the resident to a colleague, you use the honorific 召し上がる for her eating — respect for the resident stays constant. Report amounts, not just yes/no.

Nurse Sato

すいぶん
わかりました。水分を こまめに とってもらってください。

Understood. Please make sure she takes fluids frequently.

Why: こまめに = 'frequently / a little at a time' — a key care word for hydration. ~てもらってください = 'please have (someone) do ~' — the nurse is instructing you to get the RESIDENT to drink. Dehydration (脱水) is a common risk, so this is a real instruction.

Hana
(caregiver)

はい、<sup>しょうち</sup>承知しました。

Yes, understood.

Why: 承知しました is the humble, workplace way to say 'understood / certainly' — more professional than わかりました when receiving an instruction from a nurse or senior. Use this at work to sound reliable and respectful.

Nurse Sato

なに <sup>か</sup>変わったことがあれば、すぐ <sup>し</sup>知らせてください。

If anything changes, let me know right away.

Why: 変わったこと = 'something that has changed'; ~があれば = 'if there is ~' (conditional ば). 知らせてください = 'please inform me'. This 'report any change immediately' instruction is the heart of 報連相 (ほうれんそう) (report-contact-consult) — the backbone of Japanese workplace communication.

Hana
(caregiver)

はい、<sup>しょうち</sup>承知しました。よろしく <sup>ねが</sup>お願いします。

Yes, understood. Thank you — over to you.

Why: Hana closes the same way she answered the first instruction: 承知しました, not わかりました — to a nurse or senior, the humble form every time, not just once. よろしく <sup>ねが</sup>お願いします then hands the matter over ('please take it from here'); it is the standard way to end a handover in Japan.
