Wandering — Walk With Her, Never Block the Door — Scenario Dialogue

Can-do: Meet a resident heading for the exit at dusk: greet her instead of blocking her, ask where she is going, walk beside her, listen to the reason she gives, turn the walk around with a warm offer, and report it to the shift.

1 · Dialogue &amp; Why — 会話

Hana
(caregiver)こんばんは。どこへ<sup>い</sup>行きますか。

Good evening. Where are you going?

Why: Greet her first, then ask. A greeting says you are walking with her; standing in the doorway says you are stopping her, and she will push past it.

Tanaka-san
(resident)いえ <sup>かえ</sup>家に帰ります。

I'm going home.

Why: To her this is simply true. Arguing with it costs you the next ten minutes and gains nothing — her feeling is real even when the facts have moved on.

Hana
(caregiver)そうですか。一緒に<sup>いっしょ</sup> <sup>ある</sup>歩きましょうか。

I see. Shall we walk together?

Why: THE RULE OF THIS EPISODE. You cannot talk someone out of walking, so walk with her. Beside her you can watch her feet, the weather and the traffic — in the doorway you can only argue.

Tanaka-san
(resident)こ <sup>ま</sup>子どもが待っています。

My child is waiting for me.

Why: The reason behind the walking. Nobody wanders for no reason — hear the reason and you have something to talk about all the way down the corridor.

Hana
(caregiver)だいじょうぶ <sup>はな</sup> <sup>き</sup>大丈夫ですよ。お話を聞かせてください。

It's all right. Tell me about them.

Why: Reassure, then invite the story. Asking about the child turns the walk into a conversation, and a conversation is the only redirection that does not feel like being handled.

Tanaka-san
(resident)むかし、この <sup>みち</sup>道をよく <sup>ある</sup>歩きました。

I used to walk along this road often.

Why: She has moved from the door to a memory, and that is the walk turning around on its own. Stay in the memory with her a little longer.

Hana
(caregiver)

そうですか。ゆっくり<sup>ある</sup>歩きましょう。

Did you? Let's walk slowly.

Why: Slow down the pace on purpose. A hurried walk at dusk is how a fall happens, and a slower one gives the conversation time to do the work.

Hana
(caregiver)

さむ<sup>さむ</sup>ですね。お茶を<sup>ちゃ</sup>飲<sup>の</sup>みませんか。

It's cold. Won't you have some tea?

Why: Offer something better than the door. ～ませんか is an invitation she can accept without losing face — and going indoors becomes her decision, not your instruction.

Tanaka-san
(resident)

そうね。少し<sup>すこ</sup>疲<sup>つか</sup>れました。

Yes... I'm a little tired.

Why: The opening you were waiting for. Take it at once — this is the moment she can turn back without it feeling like defeat.

Hana
(caregiver)

では、お部屋に<sup>へ</sup>戻<sup>もど</sup>りましょう。

Then let's go back to your room.

Why: ～ましょう, walking beside her, hands free. Never take her arm to steer her — a resident led back by the elbow remembers being held, and tomorrow she will head for the door sooner.

Hana
(caregiver)

わたし<sup>わたし</sup>私がそばにいますね。

I'll be right here beside you.

Why: <sup>みまも</sup>見守り — watchful supervision — is the care plan for wandering, and this sentence is what it sounds like. Staying close is allowed; locking a door is not.

Tanaka-san
(resident)

ありがとう。安心<sup>あんしん</sup>しました。

Thank you. That's a relief.

Why: She came to the door frightened of being late for someone. Walking with her is what turned that into relief — nothing you said corrected her.

Hana
(caregiver)

きょう<sup>きょう</sup>のことは、すぐ<sup>ほうこく</sup>報告します。

I'll report what happened today straight away.

Why: The next shift needs to know she went to the door, at what time, and what settled her. A walk nobody records is a walk that happens again at midnight with nobody watching.

Hana
(caregiver)

あとでまた<sup>こえ</sup>声をかけますね。

I'll come and speak to you again later.

仕事日本語: Say when you will go. A resident who expects you to stop needing to go looking — most of the walking starts as looking for somebody.
